Clarification to SG 2014-01 re: One-Time Overdraft Fees

TO: STATE CHARTERED BANKS

Several banks have asked questions about Superintendent Guidance 2014-01 regarding One-Time Overdraft Fees issued January 7, 2014. These banks have asked whether the Guidance supersedes the Federal Reserve Board's Regulation E relating to "opt-in" rules for overdraft programs.

The Guidance was issued in response to requests we received from the industry to clarify the application of Iowa law to overdraft fees. It clarifies that Iowa law allows banks to charge overdraft fees as deposit account maintenance fees (and not as credit fees) when properly disclosed. The Guidance addresses Iowa law only and does NOT supersede Reg. E. Banks wishing to charge overdraft fees must still comply with Reg. E and gain a consumer's opt-in to the payment of one-time ATM or debit card transactions that may overdraw the accounts. If a bank has questions about how Reg. E applies to its overdraft policies, the bank should consult with its federal regulatory agency or compliance advisors.

Sincerely,
